Course Description:
This course provides an introduction to public administration as a profession and field of study, emphasizing both theoretical and applied topics. It assumes general knowledge of American governmental institutions, but does not assume any previous coursework in public administration. The course presents an overview of the major topics in public administration and provides students a foundation for further study in the field.

Course Objectives:
- Examine the development of public administration as a field of study
- Introduce readings in public management, organization theory, and the characteristics of the bureaucracy
- Provide a practical side of public administration to illustrate theory through the use of case studies and in-class exercises
- Study contemporary and future challenges to the bureaucratic establishment and public management

Format:
Attendance is essential and students are expected to be prepared to fully participate in each class. Case studies will be assigned and students will brief the rest of the class on the highlights of the case. The brief is a short (7-10 minutes) presentation of the main facts and issues in the case in order to help guide class discussion.

When you are reading the cases, it is useful to pay close attention to the case’s relevance to public administration, the key facts, main issues, theoretical relationships, and practical lessons. Two students will be assigned each case so you must communicate with your case study partner prior to the presentation so as not to overlap. Each student will go twice during the semester.

The midterm is a short take-home exam. You will have one week to complete the exam. You may use any class notes, books, or other readings. However, you may not consult with other classmates. The focus should be on integrating course material and developing ideas and perspectives on them, rather than simply repeating course lectures or readings.

- Late papers will be down-graded 10% per day, including weekends.
- Any form of academic dishonesty, such as cheating on examinations or plagiarism, will NOT be tolerated. Students are expected to know and follow the University rules on academic honesty.
- The CSU Student Handbook defines plagiarism as: Stealing and/or using the ideas or writings of another in a paper or report and claiming them as your own. This includes but is not limited to the use, by paraphrase or direct quotation, of the work of another person without full and clear acknowledgment. The penalties for plagiarism are found in the Student Handbook under Academic Regulations. (Academic Regulations http://www.csuohio.edu/studentlife/conduct/acadregs.html)
- Students with Special Needs: “Any student who feels he or she may need an accommodation based on the impact of a disability should contact the Office of Disability Services at 216-687-2015 located at UC304.” Students should notify the instructor as soon as possible if they have been granted an accommodation through the Office of Disability Services.

FINAL EXAM

Your final exam will be an in-class closed notes/closed book exam. You will receive the exam questions on April 30. I will choose 3 questions from section A and you will answer 2 of them. I will choose 2 questions from section B and you must answer 1 of them.
GUIDELINES FOR FINAL TEAM PROJECT

Team projects are used in this course because it more accurately reflects what goes on in real-world public administration. Unlike academic projects, government projects are rarely written and carried out by a single individual. A written report will be prepared by teams of 2 students during the semester on one of the public papers contained in either the Mosher or Stillman texts, Basic Documents of American Public Administration (provided in class).

Each paper should analyze one basic document in American public administration that has served as a building block for the field. The paper should include the following parts:

Part 1: Introduction. Outline the content of your report.

Part 2: Origins. Cover the historical, social, and political background of the particular document.

Part 3: Prescriptions. Indicate the values, outlooks, processes, or procedures in the document under study and why they were put forward by the authors.

Part 4: Operation. Show how the administrative document actually was put into practice, and describe its specific achievements or failures, as well as any new problems it created.

Part 5: Impact. Summarize the contributions of this document to the theory and practice of public administration.

Part 6: Conclusion. Summarize the key ideas in your report.

This team project is expected to be a scholarly piece of firsthand research using primary sources, field interviews, and the study of documents, hearings, and such. A polished final report that is readable and insightful is expected from each team. Your final project must include a short paragraph from each person briefly describing each team member’s contribution. The project will receive a single grade.

The oral presentations by research teams on the documents they are studying are expected at the end of the semester. The formal oral reports should be approximately 10-12 minutes long and should be carefully prepared for class delivery.

1. Use Times New Roman 12 point font, 1-inch margins. The final project must be 20-25 pages, not including references. You may use any type of citation method you choose (APA, MLA, Turabian). Section headings and page numbers are required.
2. There should be no spelling or grammatical errors in the project. Edit, edit, edit!
3. Proofread the final project very carefully. I know I just said this, but it is imperative in the work world and the academic world to be able to express yourself in a cogent and clear manner.
